

Countless Without

©2026 by Dan Curtis

Do you remember when we first met?
Do you remember when we first said?
I gave you love, and you danced with me.
For a moment, eternity.

One moment I'll never forget.
In the fall of the year,
And the fall of a tear.
Forever bound, yet cannot possess.

Let not the abyss tear us apart
from each other, let us be one.
If we could just reach through time,
See the ties of love that we bind.

Beyond the veil we understand,
and divine what the sands have decided,
and the scars of life have grown cold.

When the tides have all gone,
and we're all alone from each other,
I can feel you even in loss.

Have I held you in, have I cast you out?
What have I done that sent you away?
The chasm of time that breaks every heart.
Would a love strong enough ever reach 'cross?

Would it breach the stone walls that keep us apart?

Then once I could hear you still calling me,
bringing me back to our beginning.
One life, it would be enough.
But countless without, no... let it not be--
Countless without, no...
Let it not be.
