

Do You Remember Me

From the screenplay "The Manitou"

©2025 by Dan Curtis

I know your face, I know, but how,
we've never met.
Like a dream I can't forget.
A light in your eyes that pulls me through time.

Something whispers in the water,
Something calls me from the stone.
I've been here, I've been her,
I've loved you before.

Do you remember me?
Every lifetime, I still wait through the centuries.
I feel you reaching out, Do you remember me?
Or am I the only one who knows?

I see the forest like I planted every tree.
I hear your voice a language;
I shouldn't speak.
This isn't madness, this is memory.

Something whispers in the water
Something calls me from the stone
When I was Tamaya, and I loved you before

Do you remember me?
Every lifetime, I still wait through the centuries.
I feel you reaching out, Do you remember me?
Or am I the only one who knows?

In drowning once, in love and winter.
But love doesn't die, it just comes back in time.

I will not forget again.

Do you remember me?
I've been calling all my life through the centuries
Your heart was always mine,
You remembered me, and I remember you this time...

Green light in the water...
Green light in your eyes...
I remember...