

Praise His Name

Lyrics ©2012 by Dan Curtis
(to the tune of "Turn The Page")

I wake up for the sunrise, an early day in fall.
I open up my eyes and feel the spirit in my heart.
I thank Yahshua then I hear the Shofar call...

But my thoughts will soon be wandering
just like they always do,
Why do people keep on asking me
"You think you are a Jew?"
But I don't feel much like fighting
I just wish that they all knew...

Here I am, At Sukkot again!
Here I am, at oneg!
There I go, singing psalms again!
There I go, praise his name!

Then you walk into the reading of Deuteronomy
and fellowship is kneeling to pray before we read.
You open your heart to hear
The word of Devarim.

And most times you can find a seat, other times you stand.
After midrash there is dancing, there is song and worship yeah!
And you always have your brothers and sisters holding hands...

Here I am, At Sukkot again!
Here I am, giving praise!
There I go, singing psalms again!
There I go, praise his name!

When your out there in the sukkah, the stars are overhead,
and the glory of the heavens is all you understand,
and the love fills up your nephesh, like the promise that he made!

(Instrumental)

Later in the evening, as I lie awake in bed
the echoes of the shofar still ringing in my head.
I say the day's last shema, remembering what he said.

Here I am, At Sukkot again!
Here I am, at oneg!
There I go, singing psalms again!
There I go, praise his name!

Repeat / End
